

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE 3

JACK ANDERSON'S WASHINGTON
LETTER
May 1985 Volume 11, No. 9

PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL

* * * *

EXCERPTED

Footnote: The uproar over Japan's aggressive trade practices overlooks one thing: Japan is forbidden to compete in the international arms market dominated by American companies. If it could, a CIA analysis speculates, it would give U.S. arms merchants a real run for their money. "A study conducted by a Japanese research center concluded," the CIA reported, "that if Japan participated in the international arms market it would control 60 percent of the shipbuilding, 40 percent of the military electronics, 46 percent of the military automotive market and 25-30 percent of the aerospace market."

* * * * *

EXCERPTED